DRUGS AND MEDICATIONS

- I understand that I may receive a local anesthetic and/or other medication. In rare instances, patients can have a severe reaction to the anesthetic, which may require emergency medical attention. Patients can also find that it can reduce their ability to control swallowing. This increases the chance of swallowing or aspirating foreign objects during treatment. Depending on the anesthesia and medications administered, I may need a designated driver to take me home. Temporary or permanent nerve injuries rarely result from an injection.
